Community Development

Cut labor-intensive manual processes for land management

WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?

Communities from small to large face time-consuming processes, aging infrastructure and complex community development needs managing their long-term vision and goals. Combined with requests from citizens who want access to real-time to information, agencies struggle to keep up with increasing constituent demands.

WHAT IS THE SOLUTION?

CentralSquare Community Development empowers local governments with a role-based, configurable system to automate all aspects of community development and land management projects. When you need visibility into data to make more meaningful decisions for your community, robust analytics, GIS integration, and mobile capabilities enable staff and citizens access to the right information.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS?

Projects progress automatically through the system with workforce triggers aligned to agency processes – from application to inspection, to documentation and results. Departments gain a full array of data intelligence with standard and tailored reporting dashboards, accessible from any internet-connected device, enabling field personnel to complete and file reports from the field. The citizen-facing portal gives citizens and employees alike online access for faster responses and greater satisfaction.
