Tropical Arctic

Lost Plants, Future Climates, and the Discovery of Ancient Greenland
Jennifer C. McElwain, Marlene Hill Donnelly, and Ian J. Glasspool

“In this gracefully written book, the authors describe changes in the climate and forests of East Greenland hundreds of millions of years ago. They weave together the tools and tricks of both scientists and artists to produce a compelling narrative of discovery, interpretation, and illustration.”—Judith Totman Parrish, University of Idaho

The Other Dark Matter

The Science and Business of Turning Waste into Wealth and Health
Lina Zeldovich

“An intriguing, compelling, very human story of how a valuable resource has been used and squandered, thrown away, and rediscovered.”
—David Waltner-Toews, author of The Origin of Feces

Yellowstone Wolves

Science and Discovery in the World’s First National Park
Edited by Douglas W. Smith, Daniel R. Stahler, and Daniel R. MacNulty

With a Foreword by Jane Goodall

“Twenty-five years ago, the authors reintroduced wolves to Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming. Here, they relate what they’ve learnt of the animals’ predation, mating, play, genetics, disease and more, and their impact on other species and the landscape.”—Nature

Amber Waves

The Extraordinary Biography of Wheat, from Wild Grass to World Megacrop
Catherine Zabinski

“The story of wheat is inextricably linked with that of humans. Zabinski’s Amber Waves tells both.”—Issues in Science and Technology
Cloth

Wildlife as Property Owners

A New Conception of Animal Rights
Karen Bradshaw

“A wonderfully fresh look at how humans impact the lives of nonhuman animals (animals). . . . When nonhumans are granted the right to own their homes, rather than merely renting them from us, it will be a gamechanger for fostering coexistence.”—Marc Bekoff, University of Colorado
